It was a day like any other. Kylie was sunbathing in a hammock and reading her favorite magazine. It was July and temperatures didn't fall below 30°C. Kylie spent her vacation on the island. She thought it would be a fantastic day, but she was wrong.

The sun was shining , and there weren't any clouds in the sky. Suddenly everyone on the beach felt wet breeze. They saw an enormous shadow and then a huge wave. It was a tsunami. Kylie was terrified. She didn't know what to do and where she has to go. In the blink of an eye she was under the water…She couldn't take a breath, because the water was everywhere. She lost consciousness. When Kylie woke up she was in a small cottage. Strangers stood around her. She was very confused and she had a headache. Then an old women came in and told teenage Kylie that she was two weeks unconscious. The girl was very grateful for taking care of her when she was sick. She promised to send letters to the old women from time to time.

It was terrible time for teenage girl and she decided to never come back there.
